

VITGINIA RALLY

FIRST GUN CONTROL BILL THIS SESSION PASSES HOUSE

NEW BILLS FILED

BILLS MOVE OUT OF COMMITTEE

PUBLIC HEARINGS NEXT WEEK

I was very pleased to see the turn-out at the rally in Olympia last Friday. But Monday's turn-out in Richmond, Virginia set a record for public, overt, armed support of the Second Amendment. Virginia State Police say more than 22,000 participants showed up, many of them from other heavily-populated eastern seaboard state. While no one inside the fenced "secure" area was armed, thousand of citizens on the public areas outside were, with everything from concealed carry handguns to every kind of "assault weapon" available – including one guy with a .50 caliber "sniper rifle." In reaction, the Virginia legislature the next day passed a "red flag" protective order bill out of committee and they are planning to repeal The Old Dominion state's CPL reciprocity law. The main point is that despite the hysteria generated by Governor "wet panties" Northam and the media, not a shot was fired. One arrest – of a woman violating the "no masks" order, probably Miss Antifa.

I mentioned previously that bills that did not pass out of the legislature during last year's session were still available for action. Well, on Tuesday the House Rules Committee pulled HB 1010 (Senn D-41, WSP destruction of seized/forfeited firearms) and sent it to the House floor for a vote. Yesterday, the House passed it on a pretty much straight party-line vote. That side-steps half of the process in getting a bill passed. It now goes to Senate Law & Justice for their action. Keep in mind there are more than a dozen other "last year's" bills they could do this with, avoiding public hearings until they get to the other side. It's basically a fast-track for bills, good or bad. Don't count on good (pro-gun) bills being fast-tracked!.

A few new gun bills were filed this week. Again in interests of keeping list congestion down, I'm only tracking those bills that are being acted on this session.

Now that several gun bills have had public hearings, committees are beginning to take votes on them in executive sessions. Four gun-related bills passed out of Senate Law & Justice: 6077 (hi-cap magazine ban), 6288 (violence prevention office), 6294 (CPL training mandate) and 6406 (firearm theft). SB 6288 (Office of gun violence prevention) was sent to Ways & Means to identify funding sources. 6077, 6294 and 6406 were sent to Senate Rules awaiting a floor vote of the full Senate.

Gun bills have been the focus of legislative activity last week, but despair not – a few more will be heard this week! House Civil Rights & Judiciary will conduct a public hearing on Wednesday, 29 January on House Bills 2305 (Doglio D-22, expands prohibition on possessing firearms for subjects of restraining orders), 2622 (Kilduff D-28, failure to surrender weapons after receipt of a restraining/protection order), and 2623 (Walen D-48, added firearm prohibitions for persons convicted of certain offenses, apparently dealing with animal cruelty).
